

PREVIEW · FROM THE CLIENT PIPELINE, MODULE 01

CLIENT PROFILE WORKSHEET

The four-part client profile — written from your three best past clients, not from a wish.

This preview includes the four-part framework and a fill-in template.
The full worksheet is available inside The Client Pipeline course.

THE FRAMEWORK

01

THE FOUR-PART CLIENT PROFILE

A client profile is not a wish. It is a filter. It is written from your three best past clients — the ones whose projects went well, paid on time, and referred other buyers like themselves. When you have the profile, you can read an inquiry and know within a minute whether it is worth a call.

A pipeline built on a vague profile will deliver vague work.

THE FOUR PARTS

01 · The buyer

Who they are: role, discipline, stage of business, how they found you. Not a demographic — a working role. "Marketing director at a 40-person law firm who has hired creatives before" is more useful than "professional services, 25–55".

02 · The trigger

What happened in the last 90 days that made them reach out. A new product. A rebrand. A leadership change. A website that finally broke. The trigger tells you whether the project is real or aspirational.

03 · The scope they need

What they actually buy, in their language. Not what you wish they bought. If your best clients consistently buy a six-week sprint and not a retainer, the profile says so.

04 · The disqualifiers

The traits that, if present, mean you should decline. Budget below your floor. A decision-maker who is not in the room. A timeline that requires you to drop other clients. Named now so the decision is not made under pressure.

The full worksheet walks you through extracting each part from your three best past clients — including a 12-question interview you can run on yourself, by re-reading the project notes and the emails you saved.

THE TEMPLATE

02

WRITE YOUR PROFILE

Fill this in from your three best past clients. If you cannot answer a section, that section is the next thing to figure out. Do not invent it.

01 · The buyer

Role, discipline, stage of business, how they found you. One sentence.

02 · The trigger

What happened in the last 90 days. Be specific — a name, a date, an event.

03 · The scope they need

What they actually bought, in their language. Not what you wish they had bought.

04 · The disqualifiers

Three traits that, if present, mean you decline. Named now.

THE THREE CLIENTS THIS PROFILE IS BUILT FROM

Client 01 Name (or initials) · project · year · what made them a good fit

Client 02 Name (or initials) · project · year · what made them a good fit

Client 03 Name (or initials) · project · year · what made them a good fit

The profile is not a wish. It is a filter. The filter is what makes the pipeline calm.

Margin / Form is a fictional creator business. This is a demonstration resource.